SOMEWHAT TO READ FOR THEM THAT LIST

1591

CLAPHAM'S 'NARCISSUS '

Narcissus, sine Amons luvenihs et praecipue Philautiae brems atque morahs descnptw, written in Latin hexameter verses, and dedicated to Henry, Earl of Southampton, by John Clapham Herein Narcissus,

quern luminis orba
Prospentas genuit, pepmt Superbia vana, Et tepido e[r]rons nutnuit Opinio lacte,

being smitten by the arrow of love came to the fountain Philautia, and there falling in love with his own image, cried out to it, but was answered back m mockery by Echo Night coming on, the image vanished, and the infatuate youth unable anywhere to find his love, fell from the bank into the nver and so perished

COSIN'S [c] APOLOGY FOR SUNDRY PROCEEDINGS *

An Apology of and for sundry proceedings by jurisdiction Ecclesiastical, of later times by some challenged, and also dwersly impugned by them, written by Dr Richard Cosm, though without the name either of author or printer on its title He noteth that of late certain disturbers of Her Majesty's happy reformation had rested themselves most in advancing a new-found discipline and m discrediting the present government Ecclesiastical by their speeches and writings, as well by impugning the callings and form of Ecclesiastical government as by defaming the persons of the governors with unchristian gibes, contumelies and other indignities But when these had not succeeded according to their wish, they pursue a more politic course, for by themselves, and others more simple excited cunningly by them, they challenge divers received proceedings m Courts Ecclesiastical as not justifiable by law, and by their frequent clamours, some very grave, wise and learned (no way